Describe your family by telling us the ages of persons living in your home.

Do your younger children use your kitchen now?

Are you considering remodeling your home?

Where do you serve most of your meals?

Is there an area where you would like to eat your meals?

Think of the activities that currently takeplace in your kitchen area. Are there more activities you wish you could fit into this space?

How often do you entertain? How many people, usually? And is your style of entertaining formal or more on the informal side?

Do you enjoy hosting family holidays and event celebrations? How many people are in these groups?

Do guests help you in your kitchen?

How often do you find you shop for your family? And how much product do you buy each time?

Do you wish you had more storage for larger quantities? And fresh or frozen food?

Let's think now about your cooking style. This is helpful in designing a space because it is best to plan for your style and enjoyment.

Who is the primary cook? Any helpers? It helps us to know if the primary cook or helper is right or left handed, and even knowing the heights of the cooks is helpful.

When you think about style of cooking, how would you describe cooking in your home?

Does the main cook like other persons in the kitchen during meal preparation?

Do you have friends or family members with a physical limitations or special needs?

We always encourage you to scour magazines and kitchen design books so you learn about some of the most recent trends, colors, and appliances.

Are you interested in adding space to your home to accommodate the new kitchen?
